What are A-Levels?

A-Level or 'Advanced Level' is one of the next qualifications after GCSE level and is typically studied over a two-year period. At Kendal College, A-Levels can be combined with professional and technical courses (e.g. Engineering Extended Diploma & Maths A Level) or up to four subjects can be studied on a stand alone basis.

What are AS-levels?

Like A-Levels, AS Level or 'Advanced Subsidiary' Level is one of the next qualifications after GCSE level and again is typically studied over two years. An AS Level is made up of three units and an A Level is made up of six units. Students taking as AS Level in year one can then progress to an A2 level in year two, which when combined, make up a full A-Level. AS Levels were introduced to provide students with more choice in subjects as they can typically study up to five subjects in the first year.
